Renovation Of Building First Move

The Citizens' Committee which studied the physical plant of the City School System during the past year has classified the renovation of Murray High School as an immediate need if money for the proposed expansion is made available by a Yes vote on the proposal October 1.

The first part of this building was constructed in 1922 and in 1923 it not only housed the twelve grades in the Murray City Schools but housed a new institution in the community, Murray State Normal School. It was thought at that time this building would take care of the building needs of the community.

However, in 1930 the student population had outgrown the building and the east wing with the gym was added. No major remodeling has been done since the building was completed.

An itemized listing of work needed to be done in order to bring this building up to desirable standards includes: exterior; roofing and sheet metal; masonry pointing, waterproofing, aluminum windows, replace wood floors on ground floor, vinyl asbestos corridor floors, rubber stair treads and landings, six toilets remodeled, fixtures, partitions, tile floors and wainscots, dressing room improvements and acoustical tile ceilings.

This renovation has been estimated to cost $80,000. This work is necessary to protect the investment the people have in this building.

If a favorable vote is received October 1, this building would become the Murray Junior High School in 1967 and would adequately give the children of this crucial age the facilities and advantages they require.

Harry Lee Waterfield, Democratic nominee for Lt. Governor spoke at length to the group. He said that the Breathitt forces headed by Ned Breathitt had been extremely generous and desirous of a uniting of all factions of the party. He said that he welcomed the opportunity to work with Ned Breathitt and would support him fully.

Waterfield decried any efforts to link him with Louis Nunn, Republican nominee for governor. Nunn will not serve with Waterfield, because he is going to be defeated with Lawrence, he told his audience.

He told the group that the Democratic party has this great opportunity to unite under one banner and sweep into office. Waterfield said that his group lost in the primary, but this is the only way to select a candidate. "Our two party system is the best in the world," he said, "and our system of holding a primary is the most democratic method on earth," he continued.

Now that the primary is over, Waterfield continued, and we have named nominees, let us all work together and pull together for victory.

Breathitt and Waterfield came into Murray from Hopkinsville yesterday and left shortly after the party meeting at 3:00 p. m. A good crowd was on hand to greet the two candidates.

Others Who Won Honors Are Named

Other results of Kentucky State Fair that were not mentioned in the article on Wednesday, September 11, pertaining to 4-H & F. F. Kathleen is a member of the Calloway County Teen Club and student at Murray College High.

Steve Davis received a Blue Ribbon on his Senior Yearling Angus Heifer. Steve is a member of the F. F. A. organization and a student at Murray College High. These animals were judged on Friday, September 6, at Kentucky State Fair.

College High P-TA To Meet Thursday

The College High School Parent-Teacher Association will hold its first meeting of the new school year on Thursday, September 19, at 7:30 p. m. at the school.

Mr. and Mrs. James Rogers, co-chairman for the year, urge all parents to attend this first meeting.

Stars In My Crown Proved To Be Success; Meeting Is Held

A meeting of the members of the West Kentucky Productions Association, Inc. was held on Sunday at the Kenilworth Hotel.

Max B. Hurt, president of the association made a report to the group, giving credit to the many persons who helped to make the production "Stars in My Crown" a success.

He pointed out the many people who gave of their time, money, technical advice, and cooperation to make this first year's production of the musical drama the success that it proved to be.

Frank Lancaster, theater manager in this report, made a brief summary of the operations during the summer.

Sixty-one performances were scheduled for the season and only three failed to go on because of rain.

Two others were curtailed because of rain, but the show did go on, he said.

A total of 25,306 persons paid to see the drama and 1234 complimentary passes were issued, making a total of 27,120 persons who saw the show, which closed the Saturday before Labor Day.

The average daily attendance according to weeks is as follows: first week 154, second week 367, third week 381, fourth week 286, fifth week 330, sixth week 360, seventh week 472, eighth week 506, ninth week 497 and tenth week 745.

Lancaster said that 7406 cars were used to bring in the audience to the play with 1609 being from 37 states outside Kentucky, the District of Columbia, Panama Canal Zone and Canada.

Ticket sales brought in $54,606.25, the concession stand $3,947.44, and the souvenir programs $3,256.60.

Twenty-two local people were hired as car attendants, ushers, concession stand workers, etc.

Bob Long, treasurer of the association reported the total receipts of the association as follows:

Contributions $27,891.00
Patrons 3,000.00
Ticket sales 54,606.25
Concession sales 3,947.44
Program sales 3,256.60
Advertising, brochures 5,008.31

The total expense of the production amounted to $86,489.43 leaving an excess over expenses of $11,320.17.

Gross payroll amounted to $48,670.76 with all phases of the production amounting to $28,489.43 leaving an excess over expenses of $11,320.17.

The scholarship winner plans to test the scholarship following her graduation in June.

Quints Switched From Sugar Water To Rich Milk Formula

By H. D. QUIGG

ABERDEEN, S. D. (UP) - The Fischer quintuplets broke through their greatest danger period today and doctors said their chances for survival were at their brightest.

The quintuplets at last were given their full Christian names Monday night. Doctors switched them to a milk formula laced with vitamins and said the kicking, wriggling tots were getting along "fine."

This day marked the end of the 72-hour "danger period" which their doctor had said premature babies must endure. They came through their time-of-most-danger in gurgling triumph.

"They were turning from end to end of their isolates, feet up against the wall, turning clear-head-to-toe. The most active? Oh, I think it was the boy. He was the weak one when they were first born but he has become a strong wiggler."

"He and Mary Catherine are the most active of the lot. She was really moving and waving her arms. She was really directing traffic."

Progress Encouraging
The latest progress report on the five tiny bundles of energy was "Condition fine, and all on milk formula." The fact that all five were strong enough to change from their sugar-water diets to the formula was encouraging.

When Mrs. Mary Ann Brady Fischer, 30, the mother of five previous children, began giving birth to the quintuplets, it was 1:58 a. m. (CST), Saturday. The last was born at 3:01 a. m. Dr. James N. Berbo, the 40-year-old general practitioner who delivered them, said they were six to eight weeks premature.

He said a general three-full-day waiting period was a most dangerous one for most babies, because of the possibility of lung membrane disease and infection.

Today there was prayerful thankfulness and a feeling of relief in the hospital run here by the Roman Catholic Sisters of the Precious Heart. The quintuplets had made it - this very far distance.

Announcements Names
Monday night, there father stood before a news conference in the hospital cafeteria and softly announced the names he and the mother had picked.

Said 38-year-old Andrew Fischer, a wholesale grocery clerk: "I want to thank the hospital staff, the doctors, the lawyers - I ask for your prayers to keep them the quintuplets alive. We have named the babies."

Here they are, in order of their birth:
Mary Ann, named for her mother, weighs about 2 pounds.
Mary Magdalene, named for her father's mother, about 2 1/2 pounds.
Mary Catherine, named for Sister M. Stephen, the hospital administrator, who previously was Catherine Davis, Sioux Falls, S. D., weight 2 1/2 pounds. "Sister Stephen has been so good to us," Fischer said.

James Andrew, named for Berbo, and the father, weighs about 3 1/2 to 4 pounds.
Mary Margaret, named for Mrs. Margaret Dorman, head nurse of the obstetric ward. Weight, 2 1/2 to 3 pounds.

The Murray Junior Chamber of Commerce will sponsor the Flying A Rodeo at the Calloway County Fairgrounds, located three miles northwest of Murray on the Mayfield Highway, on Friday and Saturday, September 20-21, at 8 p. m.

Spokesman for the event said the admission will be one dollar advance, $1.50 at gate, for adults, and fifty cents advance, one dollar at the gate, for children.

Features of the rodeo will include bronc riding, calf roping, bull riding, bull dogging, and trick riding. A parade on Friday at 4:30 p. m.

In the downtown Murray area will feature Miss Sandra Costello, Calloway County Fair Queen, the Murray State College band, Flying A Rodeo stock, and local stock.

Tickets for the rodeo may be purchased at the Bank of Murray, its Drive-In Branch, Wallis Drug Store, or from any member of the Murray JCCs.

Hurricane Cindy Collapses As It Strikes Coast

By KYLE THOMPSON

United Press International

PORT ARTHUR, Tex. (UP) - Hurricane Cindy, steadily losing strength, hit the gulf coast in a sparsely populated area between Galveston and Port Arthur, Tex., today and quickly collapsed.

An announcement was expected momentarily downgrading Cindy to a tropical storm.

No casualties were reported and there was slight property damage. Heavy rains were forecast.

Cindy collapsed as fast as she developed.

She packed gusts up to 80 miles an hour in the Gulf of Mexico. Winds as high as 74 miles an hour hit Galveston, but dropped quickly to 35.

High Winds Die
The eye of the storm passed through the tiny, evacuated town of high island between 9:10 and 9:40 a. m. (EDT). Sixty-to-seventy-mile winds died as the eye passed and rose again as the back side of the storm struck. Cindy swirled around to 35.

the high island area, a stretch of almost empty land.

At Port Arthur and Galveston, some windows broke and power lines fell. About two inches of rain fell at Port Arthur, where 2,000 people took refuge in shelter in Galveston.

Refineries and chemical plants in Port Arthur operated normally through the blow.

Cindy aimed first for Cameron, La., but veered west. Winds up to 40 miles an hour raked the low-lying Louisiana town, but the seaway contained tides.

The sheriff's office said there were no casualties and no one missing in the storm. Only a few injuries were reported in minor automobile accidents as 5,000 residents of the Cameron area fled to higher ground.

Winds up to 50 miles an hour howled through Port Arthur.

This was a far cry from devastating Hurricane Carla which struck the Texas coast two years and one week ago today, killing at least 17 persons and leaving damage in the hundreds of millions.

Develops Within Hours
A veteran New Orleans meteorologist, Nash Roberts, called Cindy one of the fastest-developing hurricanes he ever had handled.

First word of a possible storm came from the New Orleans Weather Bureau at 11 a. m. (EDT), Monday when a suspicious low pressure area developed 150-200 miles east of Brownsville off the Gulf of Mexico. Two hours later it was a tropical storm. By 8 p. m. it was a full-blown hurricane.

"Thousands of Texans, with devastating 1961 Hurricane Carla still fresh in their minds, streamed from the coast. Traffic out of Galveston on the freeway to Houston was reported 'bumper-to-bumper' Monday night. Wind gusts reaching 48 miles an hour whipped Galveston.

Homes Boarded Up
Those remaining boarded up their homes to wait out the storm. Schools were ordered for storm refugees in Galveston, Port Arthur, Beaumont, and other cities.

The Dow Chemical Co. at Freeport said its plant would continue normal operations.

Shrimping boats cleared out of the Galveston Bay area.

Tides seven feet above normal were reported.

Seven-to-ten-foot waves rolled in at Grande Isle, La.

Woman's Club Hears Harry Sparks In First Meeting

Approximately 100 members heard Dr. Harry Sparks give an inspiring talk to the Murray Women's Club last evening. His topic was "Lining up your Ducks," and he very cleverly used cut-outs of ducks for his illustrations.

The first illustration was called desire. This is explained best, he said, by the proverb, "as a man thinketh in his heart so he be." The strength of our desire lies in what we really want to do. The second was direction. He asked, "where are you going?" Our students in college need to know their purpose of direction before they can be successful.

The third illustration was drop-out. As this is such a great concern in America today, Dr. Sparks gave much emphasis to this. In 1957 only 52% of the students finished high school. Greatest percent of any drop-out was the second grade. There are 30,000 teachers in Kentucky at present, yet our state was the only state which averaged less than the ninth grade.

Determination was the fourth and he stressed that we must be determined about our problems. "I will" is just as important as "I can." The last was divinity. He said it takes lots of hope and faith to achieve all these things. It lifts desire above selfishness. In Murray Dr. Sparks has found divinity one of the outstanding attributes.

The tables were decorated with arrangements of zinnias and marigolds. The speakers table had a large arrangement in fall colors of giant zinnias. Smaller vases of baby's breath and marigolds were arranged on the other tables.

The invocation was given by Mrs. Bill Thurmond and Mrs. Wayne Williams lead the pledge of allegiance to the flag. Minutes were read by the secretary, Mrs. Cattle Parker. Mrs. A. F. Doran, legislative chairman, gave the second reading on the proposed changes of the constitution and by-laws. The third reading will be in March at which time the club will vote on them.

Mrs. James R. Albritton, KFWC scholarship chairman, displayed the plaque the Murray Club won at the state meeting. A $500.00 scholarship was given the music department by the Shell Oil Company to further the education of some worthy student. Mrs. Albritton also gave a brief run-down of the fall board meeting she attended last week in Louisville. The theme of the meeting was "Vision and Purpose".

Roll call for each department was taken. The new club hostess, Mrs. Kenneth Palmer, was introduced. She gave her new phone number, 480-2111, so members could call her on any club business.

The new piano chosen by a committee from the music department was on display. Mrs. Vernon Shown sang "When I have sung my Song" and "Swanee". She was accompanied by Mrs. Richard Parrell.

Fred Schultz gave a brief discussion on the proposed school tax bill to be voted on in October.

The Zeta and Sigma departments were hostesses.

son. Often I have noticed that as they play some of them run to their teachers. I see Mrs. Mary Lou Lassiter and Mrs. Bonnie Crouch. The child might be seeking a pat on the back as a stamp of approval for a job well done or a word of encouragement during a difficult task. It's easy to see they are looking for guidance and leadership.

As I walk along I wonder what the future has for these future citizens of our town.

Are we as parents doing enough to insure their success? Are we providing the proper equipment to build the kind of men and women that can face and solve the problems that we as parents have created?

I watched these children and my mind began to wander back to my childhood as to the games we played and the clothes we wore. I noticed the games are different and the styles have changed. But beneath those clothes there is something that will never change—the heart of a little child—each one with the same basic needs. The need to be loved, fed, clothed, and educated. I wondered how in my humble way I could help these children and mine?

One day last week, my daughter, Vicki, brought the answer to me in the form of an article sent by the superintendent of our city schools and the board of education. I read the article and I was not sure I wanted to help after all. My first reaction was more taxes.

I continued to read and I began to reason with myself. Now, I ask you to reason with me.

I know we have a good school. No one doubts this. We rank among the highest in the state in the field of academics, sports, and every other field. There is just one thing that is wrong. We have outgrown the building. This is no one's fault. It is just another sign of a productive and progressive Murray.

It reminds me of the growth of my son. When he was four years old he could wear the pants of a four year old. But, as he became older I had to buy new pants because of his outgrowing the old ones. Then I have seen some of his older pants become worn, still good pants, but in need of a patch here and there. I always found a way to provide for the growth of my son.

New we have outgrown our educational plant and as pants need some patching so does our school. I looked up my tax assessment for the current year and found that for the price of a half cup of coffee a day I can help to provide the kind of school that will better teach my children and yours and give them a giant step down the road to success.

If an insurance salesman was to approach you with this proposition, you could not sign the paper fast enough. He might say "Mr. Kingins for the price of one-half cup of coffee a day, I will add $10,000 to the income of your son or daughter

Record Number Board Feet Produced

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of Agriculture Orville L. Freeman said today a record 10 billion board feet of timber was cut in the national forests during fiscal 1963.

Freeman said the timber harvested had a total value of $134.4 million. The harvest was one billion board feet over the preceding year, and 600 million board feet over the previous record harvest of 9.4 billion in 1960.

The volume of timber sold in fiscal 1963 came to 12.2 billion board feet. This was 1.9 billion board feet over the 1962 sales. It indicated that in addition to the 1963 production, sales also included some timber on hand.

The Agriculture Department has announced that the wool incentive prices for the 1964 marketing year will be 82 cents per pound, the same price that has been in effect since the wool program began in 1955.

The department also announced during his working years. "This is only a fraction of money that a good education can make for him."

Our school is a good school but it was built for a town of 3,000 not for a progressive city of over 10,000.

My son is a senior at the best consolidated school in the entire state, Calloway County High School. My daughter will be graduated from Murray High School before this plan can be put into working order.

But for your children and my grandchildren, I'm going to the polls on October 1, 1963 and promise to pay the price of my half cup of coffee for the education and future security of my children and yours.

How about us all going together? Hopefully, that the support price for mohair during the 1964 marketing year will be 72 cents, 4 cents lower than for the 1963 marketing year.

Hal K. Kingins

Under the incentive payments, the government guarantees wool growers 82 cents per pound for their wool. The growers sell their wool at the market. If their return does not average 62 cents per pound, the government makes up the difference. During the 1963 marketing year, the average wool price was 47.7 cents per pound. For each $100 dollars worth sold, the growers got an extra $39 from the government.

The Foreign Agricultural Service FAS estimates that the 1963 wheat crop in Europe's common market countries will be 2.3 million metric tons. This is about 6.4 million tons below the record crop of 1962 and about 1 million tons below the average production of 1959-61.

FAS said the severe winter in France resulted in a loss of about 25 per cent of the planted acreage as well as a reduction in the yields on the acres that survived the winter.

GREAT ENGLISH SPY MYSTERY THE FIFTH PASSENGER BY EDWARD YOUNG

From the novel published by Harper & Row, Inc. by arrangement with Curtis Brown, Ltd. Copyright © 1963 by Edward Young. Distributed by King Features Syndicate.

CHAPTER 18

IN THE salon of the Black Pearl Captain Gustavsen leaned toward Jane Day and began talking to her with the pompous gallantry he evidently affected when conversing with attractive women.

Peter Carrington turned to his morose neighbor, "I'm sorry," he said, "I'm afraid I didn't catch your name."

"Ramsey." The man's voice was timid, soft and pedantic. "You are one of the passengers?"

"Yes."

"There are four passengers altogether, I understand?"

"Five," said Ramsey. "Someone is arriving this afternoon, I believe."

"Well, I gather he's rather a doubtful starter. He should have come on the afternoon train, but he wasn't on it after all."

"Oh, he's running it rather fine, isn't he?"

"He certainly is," agreed Carrington, his attention wandering.

Mr. Brünner, there's another passenger, then, whom I don't think I've met."

Ramsey looked quickly round the room. "Yes, the Dutch doctor, Doctor Friedhof. He doesn't seem to be here at the moment."

"Ah, yes, Mr. Van Krimpen mentioned him last night."

The stewardess was bringing round drinks, Ramsey, sipping a dry sherry, said, "The lady with you—is she your wife?"

"No, no," replied Carrington, with an unexpected twinge of pleasant emotion at the idea of it. "No, we met on the train coming down here."

"Are you spending a holiday in these parts?"

"No—Mrs. Day is, but I'm afraid I've come down to do some complicated work in peace and quiet."

"I see."

Their conversation seemed to be leading nowhere, and for a moment or two there was an embarrassing silence between them. Gustavsen was still talking to Jane. Tony Gardner, alert to everything that was going on, appeared to be listening politely to Mrs. Butterfield's description of her daughter's home in Rotterdam. Van Krimpen and Brünner had lit cigars and were exchanging decautary remarks in German.

"I don't know. I am a school-master, you know—my headmaster has very kindly given me leave for a sabbatical term. I had a . . . a sort of nervous breakdown a few weeks ago . . . You see . . ."

Carrington looked at him in alarm. The man's face had suddenly become extremely emotional, and he was pulling a handkerchief from his breast pocket.

" . . . the truth is, my wife . . . died a month ago, and I . . . The poor man was clearly near to tears. And a moment later he stumbled to his feet, muttered an apology and walked quickly out of the room."

There was an uncomfortable hiatus in the general conversation.

"I'm sorry," said Carrington. "I seem to have said the wrong thing."

Brünner moved over and sat next to him.

"No, Mr. Carrington," he said, putting his hand on his arm. "It's not your fault. Poor Mr. Ramsey still can't get over his wife's death, and the least thing is liable to remind him of it. He often gets upset like that, and we find it better to leave him alone as much as possible. He seems to prefer it that way at the moment."

"Yes, poor fellow," said Gustavsen, "his wife's death has upset him a good deal. She was quite young, I believe."

IT DID NOT take long for the conversation to regain its momentum and presently the door opened and a man walked in whom Carrington had not seen before. He guessed his age at nearer sixty than fifty-five.

"Ah, Dr. Friedhof!" cried the captain, turning round in his chair and waving his arm. "Come and have a drink."

But the doctor seemed a little put out at finding the room so full of strangers. He remained standing by the open door, and made a pretense of looking at his watch.

"Thank you, but . . ." He hesitated. "I am trying to finish one or two letters. I really came in to inquire when the last mail will be leaving the ship."

His words came a little slowly, with a trace of guttural emphasis on consonants, but like most Dutchmen he spoke excellent English.

Carrington watched him carefully, trying to imagine what his face would be like without the pince-nez and with the chin concealed by a ginger beard. The mere removal of a beard could be enough, he knew, to make a man well-nigh unrecognizable, even to his friends. Was it conceivable that this was Bill Howard, brilliantly disguised?

"There will be a boat leaving in about half an hour to take our friends ashore," Gustavsen was saying. "That may be the last opportunity before we sail, but of course if you have anything important . . ."

"Thank you, that will just give me enough time," said the doctor, and excusing himself to the company with a smile and a little nod he left the room.

By this time Carrington had decided, with a sense of disappointment, that Doctor Friedhof was genuine enough. Even with the greatest stretch of the imagination he could not see him as the man he was looking for.

The Swedish mate entered the salon, smiling cheerfully as usual, threw his cap onto a small card table near the door, and sat down in the empty chair next to Carrington.

"Well, Jan," said Carrington, "it looks as though you will have good weather—at any rate for the start of your voyage."

Isaksen shook his head doubtfully. "Too little wind, and it is growing misty again. . . . Goot evening, Mrs. Day, nice to see you again!"

Carrington turned his head and looked out of one of the starboard portholes. The mate was right. The land had become noticeably less distinct during the last hour.

"Hullo, Mr. Isaksen," said Jane. "I've completely fallen in love with your ship. You couldn't find room for an extra passenger, I suppose?"

"Ja, ja, plenty room. Come with us, and fall in love with me too!" And he roared with laughter.

"I don't think you've met Mr. Van Krimpen's mother-in-law," said Jane, smiling. "Mrs. Butterfield, this is Mr. Isaksen."

The Swede stood up and shook hands with the old lady across the table.

The conversation now became general. Carrington sat quietly, not saying much. His mind was occupied with his problem. There was no sign of Bill among the passengers, and he was at last forced to the conclusion that his former commanding officer had, both literally and metaphorically, missed the boat.

In due course, he supposed, he would hear from Bill and learn what had happened. Meanwhile, it would seem, he himself would have spent three days away from his office desk to no purpose. On the other hand, if it hadn't been for Bill's phone call he would never have met Jane.

"The words of the message sprang out at Carrington with the shock of a cold shower," the story continues here on Monday.

TRIAL OCT. 15—Gareth Martin, 23, son of a Bronx Criminal Court judge, enters court in New York to face vehicular homicide charges. With him is his attorney, Maurice Mandelbaum. Martin was the driver of a car involved in an accident fatal to five persons, and a public furor was created when a panel of judges, associates of his father, cleared him of drunk and reckless driving charges. Trial date is Oct. 15.

Tit For Tat!

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I know what THIN-NER AND MADDEN is going through. I lost 45 pounds in the last six months and I feel better and look younger and prettier.
Everyone I know tells me how great I look—except one person.
She insists that I don't look like myself, and that she preferred the old fat me! Incidentally, her husband is one of those who complimented me. Well, this woman who preferred the old fat me recently got contact lenses, so when I saw her, I told her she didn't look like herself and that I preferred the "old bespectacled her!" She got the message and now she isn't speaking to me any more. I don't feel that I've lost a friend—I just showed her up for the jealous cat she was.

THIN AND HAPPY
DEAR THIN AND HAPPY: If you wanted the last laugh, you got it, but people who fight fire with fire eventually make ashes of themselves.

DEAR ABBY: What is the right thing to do in this situation? We had planned for over a month to put supper together at a friend's house on a certain evening. That evening arrives, you are ready to go—the food you are taking is ready, and the friends expect you in half an hour. Then your husband's mother and father walk in unexpectedly with an aunt and uncle. They stay and stay. Finally you sneak away from them for a minute and phone your friend and say, "We can't come and I'll tell you why later;
goodbye."

STUCK
DEAR STUCK: YES! You should have greeted your unexpected callers with the regret that they had not telephoned first as you were on your way out to a planned get-together, then taken your food (the hostess was no doubt counting on it) and departed!

What's on your mind? For a personal reply, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Abby, Box 3365, Beverly Hills, Calif.

Hate to write letters? Send one dollar to ABBY, Box 3365, Beverly Hills, Calif., for Abby's new booklet,
"HOW TO WRITE LETTERS FOR ALL OCCASIONS."

Mrs. Loretta Jobs Reports At Meet On Convention

Woodmen Circle Grove 126 met
Thursday evening at the Murray Woman's Club House for the regular monthly dinner meeting and ritualistic work.
Loretta Jobs, grove president and state treasurer, presided. The evening prayer and grace was led by Mrs. Jessie Houston Roane.

Reports of the national convention held at the Sherman Hotel in Chicago Aug. 16-26 were highlights of the dinner session. Attending from the Murray Grove were Mrs.
Jobs, a National representative from Kentucky; B. Wall Melugin, member of the National Junior Activities Committee, and Golda Curd, member of the National Advisory Committee.

Mrs. Jobs served on the National Finance Committee; Frances Snyder of Paducah, the other national representative from Kentucky on the Scrapbook Committee. Mrs. Melugin performed in the office of Junior Supervisor in the national demonstration, and Mrs. Curd was installing attendant and had the honor of presenting National President Lena Alexander Shugart for installation and escorting her to the rostrum in the installation ceremony conducted by Past National President Clara B. Cassidy.

Donna McCann of Paducah, recently elected Southern States Tau Phi Lambda president, was chosen to compete in the "Miss Future" contest at the Sorority Convention and won third place honors in the National competition. The contestants from some 20 Sorority chapters over the jurisdiction appeared first in costumes representing their state and made a one-minute speech. They wore evening gowns in their second appearance.

For her first appearance Miss Mc-Cann chose the official costume of a Kentucky Colonel. She received a resounding applause as she proudly walked down the long aisle.
For her second appearance she was charming in a short formal of red lace.

Mrs. Jobs in reporting on the national convention thanked the local grove for helping her to attain the position of national representative and for the wonderful trip she had enjoyed.

The door prize Thursday evening went to Kathleen Patterson. Mary Louise Baker received the birthday award for the month. Table arrangements and decorations were furnished by Mrs. Hazel Tutt. Twenty-three officers and members attended the dinner.
